Abstract Translate

Online courses are becoming popular in business education and require creative strategies to maintain students' engagement and facilitate contextual and complex understanding of class concepts and theories. In this paper, we are proposing an exercise for online undergraduate Organizational Behavior courses to motivate students and enhance their understanding of class concepts through the use of storytelling. In this exercise, students work in teams to narrate stories that describe with rich detail different concepts and theories pertaining to team management in general and virtual team management in particular. The results suggest that students develop a higher level of critical thinking in virtual team management by storytelling and develop strong relations with other members of their virtual teams.

Leadership Challenges

In Short

- Competency-based education (CBE) can help the nation meet its graduation goals and address the shortages of skilled workers that are emerging as the economy improves.
- Several community colleges have developed their own versions of CBE programs, and two states are instituting CBE programs statewide.
- College leaders report that developing CBE programs offers opportunities to personalize the educational experience for students. They also say that doing so presents chal-

During the recession in 2009, President Barack Obama set a national goal for educational attainment: By 2020, the United States would again lead the world in the share of its population with a college degree or certificate. Many states then articulated their own goals for raising postsecondary attainment. Shortages of skilled workers were emerging as the economy improved, and studies projected increasing shortfalls of workers with postsecondary degrees over the decade. Since then, colleges and universities have been experimenting with promising strategies to get there. One of them is the development and use of competency-based education (CBE), which college leaders hope will reach potential students who already have some training, college experience, or work-based skills but who do not have a degree or certificate to show for it.
